

What's your investing style?

Are you an aggressive investor, or someone who's uncomfortable with risk? Is your future grad still in diapers, or closing in on high school graduation? Regardless of your investing temperament or how many years you have left to save, the CollegeChoice 529 Direct Savings Plan has an option that may be right for you.

Year of Enrollment Portfolios

These portfolios automatically adjust their mix of stocks and bonds based on your child's expected year of enrollment. So, when your child is young, the portfolios can be more aggressive – balancing a little more risk with the potential for greater returns. As higher education and that first withdrawal approaches, the goal shifts from growing savings to conserving it.

CollegeChoice has eight Year of Enrollment Portfolios to choose from:

Savings Portfolio

Do you prefer safety over growth? This lower-risk, FDIC-insured option seeks to provide a stable return, with capital preservation as the primary goal.

Individual Portfolios

Want to take a more active and consistent approach to 529 investing? Opt for one of eight Individual Portfolios. Unlike Year of Enrollment Portfolios, these don't become more conservative as your child grows up. Instead, they remain true to a specific investment strategy, until you move them to a different portfolio, which can be done up to two times per year.
